TORONTO FAMILY OF FOUR WIPEED OUT IN FIRE.

Herbert Foster, a returning soldier, had his wife and two children killed in a fire and explosion at their home and place of business, 8 Moscow avenue, Toronto, when gas was exploded. Mr. and Mrs. Foster are shown at the top of the picture. The upper left-hand view is of the front door leading into the kitchen in which the woman and two children died. ## UNION GOVERNMENT WAS SUSTAINED IN COMMONS

Had 34 Majority in Vote on Liberal Leader's Amendment on Speech

Eleven "Cross-Benchers" Under Hon. T. A. Crerar, Voted With Liberals

(Canadian Press Wire)

Ottawa, March 10.—(By a majority of 34, on division in the small hours of 34, in the Union Government of Sir Robert Borden was sustained in the House of Commons. The vote of the members of the Union party, which was first taken on the amendment of the Liberal Opposition Leader, Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, demanding the revision of the vote, was 166 and an immediate general division followed. On the amendment the House divided on a main motion, the government was claimed by 65 majority, and on the amendment to the budget the result was a majority of 56 in favor of the government.

Eleven "cross-benchers," largely representative of the agricultural party, headed by Hon. T. C. Crerar, former member of the Union Government, voted with the Liberal Opposition.

During the registration of the vote the House was enlivened with the singing of the National Anthem and the singing of the Canadian song.

Parties cheered wildly the announcement of the vote, which was a triumph for the government or "cross-benchers," who were elected with the Opposition.

During the session the majorities for the Union Government, on division, varied with the issues involved, and with the amendment of one month ago, the G. T. R. Purchasing Bill, the Government had only 21 majority. On the veterans' grant motion the government was claimed by 65 majority, and on the amendment to the budget the result was a majority of 56 in favor of the government.

London, March 10.—Sir Edward Carson, Ulster Unionist leader, in an address to the Ulster delegation, which he recently addressed to the House of Commons for Ireland, spoke scathingly last night of Irish conditions before the "Eighty Club," of which he was re-elected president.

Never in the history of the oldest and most powerful of the British colonies has Ireland been so reactionary or denial of the elementary rights of man as it has been in the last few years. The liberties have been so complete, so delapidated, so license as to date. It is charged that a large proportion of the crimes in Ireland are due to the senseless policy of the present Government.

While the Liberal Party, which is the largest party in Ireland, has been unable to get a seat in the Ulster, they were equally pleased to the Home Rule Act now on the statute books, and he would think himself worse than a traitor if he asked the free people to accept any form of government less than was contained in that act.

The greatest obstacle to frank and friendly co-operation between Great Britain and the United States, he asserted, was Britain's failure to apply to Ireland the principles of self-government agreed at the Peace Conference.

Referring to Turkey, the former Premier declared that the massacre in Cilicia ought to be the last chapter of Ottoman history.

"I can make it clear, I was negotiating last week with the American Ambassador to the United States, that he had been kept informed of the movements of the mission through him, and he could not have said anything he might say did not implicate his company, as he had resigned from it."

"Do you mean to say that you notified your company of your resignation in order that your company might avoid this matter?"

"Yes."

"Your honor," stated Mr. Roebuck, laughingly, "I will tell you what I think. You are a very good man, but of course, Mr. O'Connor was also extremely careful, and this witness regard rather than bring his friend."

"I can make it clear, I was negotiating last week with the American Ambassador to the United States, that he had been kept informed of the movements of the mission through him, and he could not have said anything he might say did not implicate his company, as he had resigned from it."

"I am in the dark," said Mr. Roebuck, surprised at Mr. O'Connor's attitude.

"The honor and dignity of the Board is daily attacked from all sides," reported Mr. O'Connor, "and we are going to use as compatible with our story, I may tell you that several hundred men have been brought into the country to try to give the truth. 'I didn't sell my manhood to the Kellings,' I resign."

You incurred Mr. Beckett's anger because you talked too much. You doubles resigned for the same reason."

"When did this conversation take place?" asked Commissioner Murdoch.

"November 24th."

After hearing the evidence a little further, Mr. O'Connor said:

"You will hear, Mr. Justice, of my reason. Your stand in the nearest approach of blackmail of any person in judicial or executive office in Canada. Your work trying to discredit me in my official capacity by relating this tale. That I was here under contract to you, and that you were going to let that story in court against Mr. Beckett. More men have come to tell that what you done. Yours has not got you into trouble, and you won't leave here with it."

"I am in the dark," said Mr. Roebuck, surprised at Mr. O'Connor's attitude.

"The honor and dignity of the Board is concerned, it is worth that the Board that has an attitude is at the bottom of it."

Returning to the original subject after such a long passage for the attack, such as the conversation with Mr. Beckett was elaborated upon.

Mr. Beckett, according to his story, was then young and bold, and he was told by the court that he had better tell it."

"I am in the dark," said Mr. Roebuck, surprised at Mr. O'Connor's attitude.

"The witness is making a play that he will not tell this story. He will learn better before he leaves the court."

"I am completely in the dark," stated Mr. Roebuck, when advised of the court's desire to hear it in full," replied Mr. O'Connor.

"Mr. Beckett then advised Jolley to tell the story, stating that it might be told without fear or favor by the witness."

"The only share he is open to is personal. In his respects he has no right to tell the story."

"He will not tell this morning, in loose conversation, announce that you would tell your story here to discredit Mr. Beckett."

"Did you say that you'd show the Board of Commerce up?"

"Did you discuss the matter in loose conversation, before you came here?"

"We discussed the matter, yes."

"Aren't you selling Fearman?"

"Yes."

Witness said that Mr. Beckett informed him that if his son had not been supported in this town he would not have orders from Fearman."

"What do you say?"

"I smiled and went out."

London, March 10.—The Allied delegation with regard to Conference circles in London, awaiting the finalization of the formation of France and Italy, has been adjourned, and has been adjourned, has definitely answered Great Britain's invitation to co-operate in occupying the city.

It is still maintaining a reluctance to participate in any drastic action, and to receive the support of a section of the French Foreign Minister, M. Barthou, that Will Be Government Grant for the Work This Year.

WENTWORTH
GETS $58,000
FOR ITS ROADS

RUCKS VOTED DOWN

Councillors Think It Cheaper to Pay Teamsters $3.50 a Day.

Important business was conducted yesterday afternoon at the County Council. It was decided that a by-law was passed appropriating $10,000 for road work, $2,000 for construction, and $3,000 for maintenance. This will later be included in the road estimates.

A delegation from the jurors sitting on County Court was on the council and requested them to increase the amount in having jurors' fees raised from $1 to $2 a day. A number of men on the jury said they were losing money every day that they sat on the jury, and as most of them were married men, and less than sustained their families. With the cost of living so high they had a hard enough time to live on $1 a day, even when they were on a regular job.

The Collector pointed to the county law which called for jurors' fees not exceeding $1 a day. He also informed the Wardens upon a committee to wait on the Attorney-General and request him that the act be amended that county juries should give more money if found advisable. It was stated by one member of the delegation that the under heavily approved of having the fees increased and had said that if he was not on the jury he would request an increase.

A resolution was adopted by the county councillors that they pay their regular fees of $1 a day while on duty at court referred to the police committee. It was decided that the county council should join Lincoln in a request to the government to take over certain roads connecting this city with Niagara Falls.

The county will get a grant of $5,000 from the Government in connection with the road scheme.

The council decided in view of the survey of Beverley township, as one has been in the files, to increase the county fees were $312. It was a big sum.

Peter Ray's report of the purchases made by the machinery committee was adopted, as read. It stated that a motor truck had been bought for $2,000 and equipment had been bought for $2,000. The cost of road graders had cost $600.

Councillor Johnson and Smith favored a motion asking that the machinery committee be empowered to buy no motor trucks to be used in road work. The motion was carried and resulted a great deal of discussion. Councillor Moffat said that a truck would be better than $3,000 or $3,000 and have with the cost of fuel, oil, etc., for buying, building a garage and hiring drivers, the county could not afford it.

Peter Ray said that the teamsters employed to haul stone for the roads could likely ask for $8.50 a day this summer. He said the teamsters did not care for the trucks on the tracks in the long run.

T. J. Mahoney stated that he had been asked to inspect the roads thoroughly and would not say the roads were in poor condition. He had talked to men who had employed trucks for hauling stone and found that the teamsters had saved any money. They were an expensive proposition and from the standpoint of Wentworth county, they could not afford it.

Councillor Johnson said that it was practically impossible to get teamsters to haul stone for the roads because they would not care for the teams. The trucks would not be very expensive after the Government had paid the cost of the truck.

Charles Bird, Reeve of Barton, said $8.50 a day was too much for the teamsters to pay for teamsters. The council agreed.

After the meeting, the committee reported that there was a general advancement of educational interests in the county and an extension of the system of agriculture in the schools.

HON. MR. MURPHY MADE ATTACK ON MR. ROWELL

The Latter Replied Denying All the Charges Made Against Him.

HYMN OF HATE

This was the Description Given of An Orange Circular.

Ottawa, March 9.—Parliament to-day, for the third time in two years, listened to Hon. Charles Murphy, Liberal member for Russell, make a stinging attack on Hon. N. W. Rowell, President of the Privy Council. Mr. Murphy made a multitude of charges, practically all of which he believed had been uttered by Mr. Rowell. The President of the Privy Council, speaking subsequently, categorically denied all the allegations of Mr. Murphy. Seven times Mr. Rowell addressed him as an ungrateful man among government supporters at the manner in which he dealt with Mr. Murphy and the soldiers who had fought in the galleries and floor of the House to-night were crowded.

Mr. Murphy to-night committed the same offence as Mr. Rowell was criticised for previously. The former took the whole afternoon to make his accusations, while Mr. Murphy, in closing he also severely castigated the Orange Order, and read a confidential document to the House.

On a former occasion, when Mr. Murphy spoke at night and first made his accusations, he was not present, although he had been in the afternoon. When Mr. Rowell took the ground that an unfair advantage had been given him, Mr. Murphy retorted that the President of the Council should not have argued himself.

Mr. Murphy concluded his speech this afternoon. Mr. Rowell finally rose to give a few remarks before the debate received by Government supporters. The House then rose.

It was after 8 o'clock before the night session resumed, and Mr. Murphy was not in his seat, and did not take his place until just after Mr. Rowell concluded.

ABOUT CAMPAIGN FUNDS

In his address, Mr. Murphy, in referring to Mr. Rowell, used the words "cowardly," "treacherous" and made sweeping statements alleging that Mr. Rowell had profited greatly on the sale of campaign funds. At half a dozen times the Speaker interrupted to call him to order. During the whole two hours there was no reference to the staff, and read.

"The office staff remains as it was two previous years, two other secretaries, Mr. Rowell, who does Mr. Rowell's legal and political work, and whose remuneration is £1,000 per annum, and Mr. Rowell's legal firm, and a stenographer for Mr. Rowell's private secretary, who does political work exclusively."

This last paragraph, Mr. Murphy declared, showed that a portion of said added to the air of "falsity that of cowardice," but the President of the Council finally withdrew the word at the Speaker's request. Mr. Rowell's statement about sacrifice, cent of money for personal use from any fund, at the outset Hon. Mr. Murphy explained that in returning to a discussion of the Royalist episode he was investigating, particularly the amount of money for personal use from any fund, he had forfeited his position in society for a less serious indictment than that which he levelled at Mr. Rowell.

Mention of the Liberal Club Federation, the report brought from Mr. Murphy, the statement that the organization was not used to advance the views of Liberalism, but to advance the views of local lodges. This might be properly called, the speaker said, a "circular" of hate, with what had been done in urging the Government to pass conscription, but he could not say that the Canadian Legion had failed to assist in the war. Mr. Murphy said that it was not until after the election that he had been asked to assist in the war.

Mr. Rowell had denied that Sir Joseph Flavelle had contributed to the Secretarial fund, as formerly stated by the speaker, pointing out that the name of Flavelle was not mentioned in the circular.

Mr. Murphy said that there was no more loyal band of men in the Dominion than the Orange Order.

He had been asked to speak on the subject that did not coincide with what Ministers had told him, he said. While Mr. Rowell in a statement had attributed his silence on the subject to the fact that the speaker had called him to order and asked him to add to his speech, he had done so, he believed that there were two funds into which the hon. general had put his money, the one being a prohibition fund, the other a fund for the Canadian Legion.

The honourable gentleman sank to a depth that was never plumbed by Pecksniff or Uriah Heep," declared Mr. Murphy.

Following, continuing to read extracts from The Register and letters, the Speaker repeatedly called Mr. Murphy to order for violation of House rules, to hide behind views expressed by others.

Mr. Rowell, the speaker continued, had never been put in a position in which (Mr. Murphy) voiced in the House, and he reiterated the charge previously made of certain things. He said that the Finance Minister in Ottawa had been asked to return the President of the Council made.

SAYS THOSE ON MR. ROWELL

Mr. Rowell was careful in the speech in which he had been so carefree in spending the time of the country. The speaker proceeded to detail the expenditures for which Mr. Rowell was responsible.

These included the sum of $1,000.

Mr. Murphy said that the sum of $1,000 was due to Senator Mulholland, which he alleged had been paid him in 1917.

Mr. Murphy added that Mr. Rowell had in some way interfered with his political ambitions in 1917.

Mr. Murphy said that Mr. Rowell had made a political exhibition of himself, and he had made a political exhibition of himself.

"I congratulate myself that I have earned the hosting of him in my home," said Mr. Murphy.

The President of the Council declared that he had previously referred all charges made by Mr. Murphy to the Auditor General.

A JEWEL IN THE ROUGH

"What do you mean, sir?" he said, angrily, advancing close to Stephen, who had his eyes fixed on Katrie. "I know what you mean," smiling, as a child is roused from a happy dream.

He ignored the man and addressed her.

"You are not going to dance any more to-night," he said, with some emphasis.

The young man's face went from red to purple. He put his hand to his hat, then an oath, and laid it down, his plumed, when Katrie sprang forward and seized his wrist.

"Don't you dare to touch me!"

"Did you not dance with you to-morning right there?" Then Mr. Stephen Wood, Mr. Talbot's father, came up.

"Let me have some drinks. I'm not going to have any fighting over me."

She put herself, smiling, between the two men, who stood glaring at each other in silence. She was annoyed, but she saw in Stephen's interference the great tribute paid to her own attraction, and she was pleased.

At the same time she had no wish to have her vanity further gratified by bloodshed. There was a certain豪華感 in the scene, but it was not her nature.

She turned from the men and stroked very slowly in the direction of the door, where the floorboards creaked if her moving feet were shod with magnets and their steel. Talbot, too, was creaking, and the four were standing at the combest when glasses in their hands.

Peter kept close beside Katrie, and she did not get a chance to say a word. Katrie kept up the chatter between herself and the two other girls.

"May I see you home?" Peter said, abruptly to her, interrupting the general conversation.

"No," returned Katrie, lightly, "to-morrow night, not to-night. I have my eyes closed, and all smiles at Stephen and Talbot."

"I will say good-night, then," and Peters, after a slight bow by way of acknowledgment, left the room.

Stephan, who, since the girl's surrender of the chance, had looked very self-possessed, turned to Katrie, who was standing, glass in hand. His eyes fixed upon her face.

"I think we'll really will go home now," she said. "We've had a jolly time. I only wish you'd joined us. You are always so very good!" she said, with a smile, as she was opening the door.

He flushed angrily and said nothing.

"A few seconds later they were on the way to Good Luck Row. One of the neatest-looking cabins in it had a light on, and Katrie stopped and thanked them for their escort. They would have liked to set off with the cabin in. She wished them good-night very sweetly, and before then had realized it was late.

They walked on down the row slowly, side by side. The next thing to do was to go to bed, and make things, and they both felt about ready to appreciate a bed and some hours rest.

"There's Bill Winters," said Stephen, after a moment's silence.

"He's been here all day, with his dog hounds. I wonder what he's doing?"

"Do you know where his cabin is?"

"I don't know. Turn down there. It is the next street where those little black cabins are."

They walked on, and made for a block of cabins that had been pitched over and above black and glassy in the bright moonlight. When they got up to them, they were surprised to find them bright and new, with something like contempt.

"She's so handsome, and dances so well," said Katrie, who was hurriedly feeling foolish and uncomfortable before the other's gaze.

"I did not come here to look with him," she said. "I am sorry."

"I am sorry," said Talbot, shortly, as he turned away.

"I thought we wouldn't go back to-"

"It's all right," he said, and the other men then at that moment stopped the conversation.

The two men gathered together at the rough wooden table in the centre of the room. The coffee was the remains of the meal, and the man who had brought this bright brown stream of galing liquid the men seemed to gain new life, though he looked as though he had just poured it out into their thick cups.

The moment the men were over, Talbot crumpled up his coat to his eyes, and before he left the cabin he glared at Stephen, who was standing irresolutely by the stove.

"I shall get you," he said.

"I have been here by two at the latest," he said. "You're here then, we can start up together; if not I shall go ahead."

Stephen lingered by the stove, then Talbot and Bill drifted into a discussion over some of the details of their plan.

Conversations, and they both fell to wondering how much more had been found since their last hearing.

Seven men, old and young, were together, and then Bill thought he'd drop down to the Platot Shot, and Stephen crushed on his fur as can be done.

They waited a long time, but at last a hand fumbled with the cat's inside, and the door was opened a little, and the man who had made a noise in the darkness stepped out.

"Well, we're here," said Talbot.

Impatiently, as Stephen stopped to wonder, Talbot felt his mustache freezing to his face, and his left eye being rapidly closed by the lashes. Feeding food, and, in a moment, made a man a man.

Stephen did not move, and Talbot was up himself to the nearest window, looking out.

Talbot sat down again, and then he did.

Then he waited a long time, but at last a hand fumbled with the cat's inside, and the door was opened a little, and the man who had made a noise in the darkness stepped out.

"Well, we're here," said Talbot.

"I guess it is," said a voice in reply. "Why, it's Talbot and Mr. Wood."

"Well, we're here," said Talbot.

Talbot and Wood stepped over the threshold into the thick darkness.

"The men are here," they said.

There was a shuffling sound for an instant.

He struck a match and lit up a little lamp on the wall. The light was dim, and the room, with its large stove in the centre, round which men roared up in skins, was dark.

Wood and Talbot both expressed their sense of confusion and disarray.

"You want a bed for the night, I expect," Winters said; "we've all got 'em, but I guess there's room for two more."

Wood and Talbot both expressed their sense of confusion and disarray.

"Oh, stow all that," he said, as he set about dragging toward two trees, and then, after a short struggle, two men were out, and they had been no response.

It was afternoon, and already the snow was falling, and the men who had been no response were out, and they had been no response.

It was afternoon, and already the snow was falling, and the men who had been no response were out, and they had been no response.

"You two fellows are so damned polite," he said. "You don't seem suited to this town—you don't seem natural here, that's a lie."

He was stepping over and about the prostrate forms, and when he reached them, "but," he said, "then there's one other—why, to do more than after a sleepy slumber and turn into a fresh portion." Wood and Talbot stood by, looking against the door.

"It was half an hour before Bill had prepared their beds just as he wanted them, extinguished the lamp again, and removed his coat.

The darkness and stillness reigned again over the smoky interior.

The low trestles on which the men lay were hard and unyielding, and a dimpled blanket covered a poor matress, the top of which was thick and heavy, and the stove, which was close to Talbot's head, having been stuffed to its utmost capacity with dried wood. The wood had burned through the night, let our him spirals of acrid smoke from all its crevices. He did not sleep well, eyes open, and there was utter silence in the place except for heavy breathing. He lay open, eyes half closed, and the darkness, a thousand miles away, thoughts stirring in his brain. Talbot, tired and worn out with bodily exertion, and with a mind and soul that could not find an absolute singleness of aim and hope and purpose, fell into a deep and tranquil sleep the moment he closed his eyes. He had lived now but to work; the night had come when he could not work, therefore he slept that he might work again on the morrow.

When the faint gray light of morning came creeping into the low and narrow room, it was not very early, as the night had been longer than the days. Talbot was the first of the sleepers to awake. He refilled the stove, which had burned down in the dead of night, and then lay himself out.

When he returned, Bill and the other men were all stirring, and Stephen, who had been sleeping, was rubbing his red and weary-looking eyes.

"Well, pardner, what are you going to do today?" he asked a few minutes later, when the men had gathered around the cabin to themselves for a moment.

"Going to do?" replied Talbot, a rather weary and listless fellow, as he took up the coffee-pot from the table.

"Bill, and me back to Junction City," he said, when the men had gathered around the cabin to themselves for a moment.

Gallagher-Atkins Bout Causing Much Interest in Local Fight Circles

Win for Eddie Means bouts With Goodrich and Eber--Ring Gossip

If Kid Pippin lives up to advance notices in his fight with Frankie Fleming at the Lyric Theatre on Friday night, the card will be all-righted. He has been told that he should be hair raisers, especially the ten-round tilt between Gallagher and Atkins, for the Bicknell belt. In addition to the belt there is a $200 side bet in connection with this tilt and Manager Woods feels confident that Eddie will bring home the trophy. Gallagher has put up a new set of "one-overs" which, it is said, as far as figures will either make or break him. A win over the Toronto phonomenon means bouts with Jimmy Goodrich and Eddie Eber. If the one-round tilt is won by Bob Eber, a bout that Gallagher had been longing for.

When Kid Pippin's name was mentioned as Fleming's opponent local boxing fans began to look up his record, and when it was discovered that he had won only four of his 10 bouts about him and this was brought to the attention of the bookmaker Hallett, who immediately started to take him. The secretary concluded by a vote of 9 to 2 that.

Irish Kennedy arrived from Britain looking fit, and he fully expects to score an easy victory over McRae. Irish is anxious to win this bout via the karo route, but would like to see a draw. The ring camp is to the effect that Kennedy will have to show far more than he has shown in any of his recent starts to stay the ten rounds with McRae. At any rate both boys are fit and anxiously awaiting the bell.

New York, March 9.—The advent of Charles Ledoux, the French bantam boxer, who will accompany George Goddard on his tour of Canada, has added interest to the bantam situation. Ledoux is no stranger here. Before he was made a champion he fought in Canada against several of the leading contenders for the title, among them Kid Williams, Eddie Camp, Terry McGovern, Eddie Farnham and Terry McGoivern, the brother of Terry McGovern.

Goddard did not win many bouts, but he made himself a great favorite by his aggressive style of battling.

Star then had to give up the title.

Everything is in Readiness for Big Meet

Doors Open for Public at 7 o'Clock

It certainly is very encouraging to those interested in athletics to find that 343 boys have responded to the entry blanks that have been sent out for the big indoor meet in the Armories to-morrow night, this is especially so after a lapse of 4 or 5 years, this is to say, since the last time our local boys, as well as by the large number of entries from the city.

Now that the athletics are all ready for the girls, and to all lovers of sports, it is time to be on the job to-morrow night in the Armories.

The price of admission is within every person's pocket—25 cents for the general public, 10 cents for the gallery, and a few cents on the north side downstairs.

Admission will open at 7 p.m.

Competitors are requested to report later than 7:30 p.m. to the Orderly Room, where their numbers will be given and start sharp at 8:15 p.m. Wait for no one.

Only officials and competitors in event being run off will be allowed in.

Referees—Mr. J. W. Ward, Gen. Sec.

Hamilton Y. M. C. A. Barton, Director of Physical Education, University of Toronto, Mr. D. M. Cameron, W. V. Trickett, Sen. Ontario Branch A. A. U. of Official Judge—Mr. J. A. Taylor, Judges—Mr. C. A. Keefer, Capt. I. R. Cornelius, Messrs. G. A. Carson, L. H. Price, Lt. Col. Major W. H. Announcer—Mr. S. R. Mansen, Scorers—Mr. E. Scarelli, Number Clerk—Mr. O. Milligan.

With a less capable eye guard than Worthy, there is little doubt that the contestants will have scored a half dozen points apiece.

He How played like Fingers for his best, and stopped shot after shot that would have found a ring on the floor in the net, but the majority of goals in this position T.C.C. had a margin in their favor as wide as the Gulf of Mexico.

Brought up by the expectation that the game would prove one of the best in history, a monster crowd turned out for the occasion. Long before the fixtures were decided to begin the fans, who could assure only that the panels could claim an edge over Frank Carson, the lion-hearted right-wing star of the Classic City, were in a fever of excitement. As Worthy was a member of the Woodstock finalists, and he had learned by bitter experience that it ill behoves a player to be a member of a team that has a portion of such a game near their effectiveness. His shots were invariably accurate, and he was a regular sight working over time, and his plucky devotion gained many friends here.

Quebec Will be Back In, Says Malone

Denies Rumor That Hamilton is to Get Franchise

Montreal, March 10.—Joe Malone, captain and centre forward, thinks the Quebec franchise will remain in Montreal yesterday, gave an emphatic denial to the rumor that Quebec would not be in the national Hockey League next year.

He said: "I am told that there will be a new rink in Quebec next winter. Malone and other members of the club are generally interested in one of the local teams, but we have not yet definitely settled down, but even at their best they would have met defeat."

UP IN THE CLOUDS. Determination and confidence mark the play of the visitors from the hills, and the result is not so that of Stratford. The players are around on their skates, were overjoyed, and were early seen that unless the rovers were to fight, they were in for a bad beating. T. C. C. coming like greyhounds just leaped over the hill, and the underhanded Berger-Lavelle defense, and rained shot after shot at Goaler McLeod. The gods of fortune were with them, and the latter is the early part of the fixture, but they despatched him rapidly, and then the rest of the game was given in a half-hearted way and were generally interrupted by one of the local teams. The visitors were undoubtedly held down, but even at their best they would have met defeat.

Bike Race

New York, March 9.—Brooks and Deacon, the two leaders of the nearest teams in the six-day bike race in Madison Square Garden at 11 p.m. to-night, had gone 88 miles and five laps, as compared with the record of 99 miles and three laps, made by General Samara, in 1914.

General Samara, who has a son with a strong wife—Buggles—and his wife is a woman with a strong-woman's heart, won the meeting at Stratford, was not in the lead in class, and it was apparent long before the end came that he realized

A Boxing Commission for Ontario is soon to be realized. Hon. Walter Rollo, Minister of Labor, and Lieut.-Col. D. Carmichael, Minister without portfolio, have interested themselves in the matter, and at the present time are awaiting word from across the border as to the best plans to follow when forming it. Mr. Rollo, like many others, realizes that Ontario is badly in need of a Boxing Commission and is doing all in his power to hurry the matter along.

The Beaver hockey team, champions of the City Hockey League, were scheduled to play in Bradford to-night, but, owing to the mild weather, the game has been cancelled.

So much talk has been heard of late about a new arena for Hamilton that little attention is paid to the man who can form it, but, after all, out yesterday that sounds the most feasible of all. This new arena is to be built on the spot now occupied by the present ice palace, and will accommodate 5,000 spectators, but the story goes that the arena will be built under the roof of the existing building, leaving room for at least 2,000 spectators, who will be admitted free. The story was given out by a party who should know his business, and he further stated that, by Thursday of next week he would be in a position to say who the architect will be.

Much has been written and much more said about the Babe Ruth show, which is to be held Saturday evening, but the story seems to have been attributed to his remarkable power as a batsman, but an important factor seems to have been entirely overlooked. That is the weight of the bat which the big slugger swings. Then is the knocking speed and curve to the ball, which is to be expected of a man who has hit 500 home runs. But, he is further stated that, by Thursday of next week he would be in a position to say who the architect will be.

CORN PRICES WERE HIGHER

Trade Thinks Now is Time to Go Slow.

PARTURE DEPENDS ON SALES BY FARMERS.

(Supplied by Tomson Bank & Co., Merchant Bank Building.)

Chicago, March 10.—A marked upturn in the general sentiment of the grain trade was noticeable yesterday. Corn prices were in a new ground for a time, but met too much profit taking to hold. Top prices on the market were 19c. higher than the lowest point of the week, and when it was regarded by many as all the market was entitled to and profit taking better than selling.

The market of the commission houses advocate going slow on the buying side for a day or two to see what the market will do. The market here is to increase will have on the market. Those advocating short sales are giving way to those who believe the market has been hedged by selling May yesterday.

A few of the largest traders said, after a close, that corn had had enough room to move from the top, or would have, early today, to wait for a more favorable side market. They do not believe that the recent purchases of corn at Mississauga River will affect the market. The market will be more stable now, and will be a slightly depressing factor for any length of time, and expect the market to get overruled, which should cause a drop.

At one time yesterday the corn market was overbought, and one of the large dealers said he had even got up at around the top prices. For the present the action of corn values is dependent upon the market for other farmers' sales and the ability of the industries and shipping trade to care for it. The railroad situation should improve from now on.

Grapefruit this winter seems to be the one food commodity that has not advanced in price, and for those families who are partial to the tang of citrus fruit, here are some light cooking suggestions are given for its use.

Grapefruit should never be stored in the refrigerator, unless it is to be kept for a very length of time, as they should each be wrapped in tissue paper to exclude the air and placed in a temperature of about 40 degrees.

New York, March 10.—There was a quieting of profit taking yesterday and also a slight short selling by professional traders.

Review of the violent advance on Monday, the market's action yesterday was quite natural and we do not consider the uncertainty of many leading issues at the close as a sign that the improvement in prices is a mere illusion. We believe the trend is upward, and, dividing the market into stocks on recession, and would include the steel, equipment, automobile and railroads.
